The brigantine Phœbe left Sydney at half-past twelve o'clock on Wednesday, the 19th instant, and was off Wilson's Promontory the following Saturday, at 2 p.m., and had the wind lasted twelve hours longer, she would have made one of the quickest passages to Port Phillip ever known; but a heavy gale from the S.W. compelled her to bear up for Kent's Group, where she remained at anchor three days. We understand this vessel is likely to become a constant trader between this port and Sydney, and from a personal inspection of her fittings up, we should say she will prove an acquisition to the trade.—Ibid.

The Ship "Castle Eden."—The officers of the 11th Regiment entertained at dinner, on Tuesday last, Captain Baker, of the Castle Eden and his officers. Lieutenant-Colonel Bloomfield passed a high eulogium on Captain Baker in proposing his health, stating that he himself was an old soldier, had made many voyages, and in all classes of ships, but that he had never made so happy and comfortable a one as in the Castle Eden, where he was proud to say the most perfect harmony and good humour prevailed, emanating in a great degree from the considerate arrangements and many excellent qualities of Captain Baker, his very kind attention to both officers and soldiers, not forgetting the good cheer and hospitality at his table, and the discipline of the ship, which Colonel Bloomfield compared to that of a man-of-war. The Colonel concluded by communicating to Captain Baker that he was deputed by his brother officers to request his acceptance of a snuff-box, as a small token of their esteem and regard, and in remembrance of their agreeable and comfortable voyage, which would be presented to him on his return to England; adding, that he hoped sincerely that the 11th Regiment would have the good fortune of again sailing with Captain Baker, and in the Castle Eden, when proceeding to India.—Colonial Times and Tasmanian, Nov. 18.

H.M.S. Calliope, 26, Captain Stanley, sailed for New Zealand August 17. The Tropic, for Sydney, was off Deal August 20. The Autumnus, from Sydney, put into Pernambuco, whence she sailed July 12. The Excretta was to sail for Sydney August 24. The Cumberland, 600 tons, was to sail for Swan River in September. The brig Watkins, 236 tons, Varty, the Garland Grove, Robson, and the barque Sarah, were to sail from Liverpool for Sydney the latter end of August.

The Bon Accord returned to port yesterday, having sprung a leak during the late heavy gales. Having coals on board, which choked the pumps, Captain Wilson thought it advisable to return to Sydney.

The Calliope, 26, Captain Stanley, which sailed on Monday, will proceed first to the Cape of Good Hope, thence to Auckland, New Zealand, and thence (should her services not be required at New Zealand) to Hongkong, to join the squadron under Rear Admiral Cockrane, Commander-in-Chief.—Times, August 22.

LATE ENGLISH NEWS.

We received yesterday, via Port Phillip, English papers to the 22nd August. The intelligence they contain is not very important.

The Queen was on the continent, where she was received with the utmost enthusiasm. Some account of her progress will be found among the extracts in another part of the paper.

Parliament was prorogued on the 9th August.

On the 8th August, Mr. Hope obtained leave to bring in a Bill for the improvement of the Waste Lands in Australia.

There had been several elections, and in all of them the ministerial candidate was successful. At Cirencester there was no opposition to the re-election of Mr. Cripps appointed a Lord of the Treasury. Sir C. Douglass, appointed a Commissioner of Greenwich Hospital, was re-elected for Warwick without opposition. Lord Arthur Lennox, appointed Clerk of the Ordnance, had no opponent for Chichester. For Belfast Lord John Chichester was the only candidate to supply the place of Sir J. E. Tennant, appointed Colonial Secretary for Ceylon. For the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright Mr. Maitland, a Conservative, was elected. For the vacancy at Sunderland, caused by the elevation of Lord Howick to the Peerage, there was a sharp contest between Mr. Hudson, of railway notoriety, for the Conservatives, and Colonel Thompson for the Free Traders: the former was successful by 627 to 429. Mr. B. Wood, M.P. for Southwark, was dead, and it was expected that Sir W. Molesworth would be elected to succeed him.

There was great excitement among the Protestants in Ireland, in consequence of the Government having removed from the Commission of the Peace, a gentleman named Watson, for heading an Orange procession on the 12th July. A very large meeting was held at Lisburne, the Marquis of Downshire in the chair, at which the Ministry was denounced in no measured terms, and a strong address to the Queen was agreed to.

The weather, although not encouraging for the harvest, was more favourable than it had been, and the crops were being rapidly gathered in. It was expected that the crop would be fully an average one in quantity, notwithstanding the wet weather, there being a very large tract of country under wheat, and the land being fertile from the immense quantities of guano that had been used.

The Liverpool wool sales appear to have been equal to those of London, in July. Tallow was in demand, and was fetching good prices. Qnotations will be found elsewhere.

In order to make room for as many extracts as possible, we have omitted correspondence and other matter, which shall appear to-morrow.

PORT PHILLIP.

We have only room this morning to announce that at a large meeting of the inhabitants of Melbourne it was resolved to send home Mr. Archibald Cunninghame as an agent to oppose the proposed Immigration Loan, and to advocate the interests of the district generally. We shall endeavour to make room for a report of the meeting to-morrow.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

In the estate of Alfred Skinner, a special meeting was held, at which a claim for £137 3s. 9d was proved on behalf of John Skinner, of Whitney, England.

In the estate of Peter Bailey, a single meeting was held, which was postponed by request.

In the estate of John Jones (late of Miller's Point) a special meeting was held, which was adjourned till half-past ten to-day, for the purpose of hearing evidence.

Richard Jones, a special meeting, at half-past one.

John Jones, an adjourned special meeting to take evidence, at half-past ten.

MEETINGS FOR TO-MORROW.

Thomas Jones, a single meeting, at eleven o'clock.

John Terry Hughes, an adjourned special meeting, at half-past eleven.

Insolvency Business.—The Supreme Court will sit at eleven o'clock to-day for the disposal of such insolvency business as may be brought before it.

PADDINGTON PRESBYTERIAN SCHOOL-HOUSE AND TEMPORARY CHURCH.

On Monday last, at one o'clock, the foundation stone of a commodious School-house and temporary Church at Paddington, near the New Military Barracks, was laid, by Sir Evan Mackenzie, Baronet, in the presence of a numerous and respectable assemblage of the inhabitants of the district, and of friends of education from Sydney.

The business of the day was commenced by the Rev. Dr. M'Garvie imploring the Divine blessing on the work.

Sir Evan Mackenzie then addressed the meeting, and concluded by saying,—"Rev. Dr. M'Garvie, Ladies, and Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in complying with the request that I should lay the foundation stone of the Paddington School. I trust that it may yet prove an alma mater for a large portion of the rising generation of Australia, whose aptitude in the acquisition of knowledge is so well known. It has ever been the boast of Britons, that wheresoever they may have been transplanted, they have invariably carried with them a deep attachment to the institutions of their country, and an anxiety to promote knowledge and education, both moral and religious. Australia, I am happy to find, forms no exception to this rule, and whoever has beheld, as I have done, the admirable working of the General Assembly's Schools in Scotland, must feel satisfied that such an institution as the present must prove eminently beneficial to the community at large. I trust that this is but the precursor of many similar institutions, as such diffusion of knowledge is the best safeguard of property and life, and the best means of ensuring a continuance of good order, and forming a society of virtuous, loyal, and contented citizens."

The workmen having prepared the stone, a bottle containing coins of Her Majesty's reign, a copy of the Deed of Grant of the land from Sir George Gipps, the newspapers of the day, &c., were duly deposited, and Sir Evan having adjusted the same by level, square, and plummet, and having given three knocks with the mallet, said "I pronounce this to be the first stone of the Presbyterian School-house and Temporary Church of Paddington, and may the Supreme Architect of the universe pour corn, wine, and oil, on this colony and city, and afford means of education, and all the necessaries and comforts of life to their inhabitants." Three hearty reverberating cheers were then given for the prosperity of the undertaking.

John M'Farlane, Esq., M.D., then said,—"Permit me, Sir Evan Mackenzie, on the part of the trustees and committee, and of the friends of education generally, who have honoured us with their presence, to congratulate you on the important work in which you have been engaged. You have this day laid the corner-stone of a building, in which the youth of this enterprising community and district are to be trained, so as to become useful members of society. Surely it is unnecessary, in this the 19th century, to urge upon the public the advantage of education, — we train — we educate our domestic animals—our dogs and our horses—and shall we not train and educate the minds of the juvenile portion of our society? At this period of our history, it is peculiarly incumbent on all persons to co-operate in the great subject of education. If we are successful in establishing schools, there is no limit can be set to Australia's greatness; and many a bright genius may be rescued from obscurity, to adorn the annals of our adopted land. The mind constitutes a broad and strong basis, on which, says an eminent writer, any kind of superstructure may be raised. Sound education will afford a power of finding satisfactory amusement for those hours of solitude which every man at some time knows, in the busiest walks of life. It constitutes one of the best supports of old age, as well as the most graceful ornaments of manhood. Even in the commercial department it is greatly desirable: for besides that it gives a grace to the man in the active stage of life, it enables him to enjoy his retreat with elegance, when his industry has accumulated a competency."

The Rev. Dr. Fullerton then made some remarks on the benefits of religious education, and on the blessings conferred upon Scotland by her parochial and educational systems, which were well received; and having pronounced the blessing, the business concluded by tendering to Sir Evan Mackenzie the thanks of the assemblage, in deafening and repeated cheers.

Refreshments and a tent were on the ground; the children of the school entered warmly into the proceedings, which were most respectably conducted, and the efforts to erect a school-house in this locality, do great credit to the trustees, the Committee, and the Rev. Dr. M'Garvie, with whose church it is in the mean time connected.

CROWN LANDS GRIEVANCE REPORT.

By the last mail we have received, among other Parliamentary Returns, a Return of all Correspondence relative to Crown Land and Emigration in New South Wales. The first document in this return is the Report of the Select Committee of the Legislative Council and Crown Land Grievances with the marginal remarks of His Excellency the Governor, the latter of which we have extracted for the information of our readers, prefixing explanatory notes to such passages as do not explain themselves.

On the subject of the minimum price of land, I feel it scarcely necessary to do more than refer to my despatch of the 17th January, 1844, No. 17—Vide Correspondence relative to Crown Lands, Part II., ordered by the House of Commons to be printed, 1st May, 1845, No. 267.—II., p. 14.

Undoubtedly the colony must for years have to struggle with the difficulties which have grown out of the changes it has undergone, and the speculations which the colonists so unadvisedly engaged in. The way to aid the colony in its struggles is to establish a good system of administration of the Crown Lands, to adhere to the Act of 1842, and to supply what is deficient in that Act in respect to squatting. To allow the large squatters to seize on all the lands of the Crown would be to ruin the colony.

With reference to Captain King's evidence, that the high minimum price had entirely put a stop to the land sales, His Excellency remarks:—

This answer suited the Committee, and therefore they passed on to another subject, without asking whether much more land would have been sold had the minimum price not been raised, or whether there were not other causes to which the present indisposition of capitalists to invest money in the colony might be ascribed.

Mr. Boyd's opinions, in respect to Crown lands, are too well known to require comment or observation.

Mr. Kemble is quite right in saying that it is impossible to make a profit by the grazing only of lands purchased at 20s. per acre, at least of the ordinary lands of the Crown; but it is not the custom of the colony to purchase land for grazing purposes only, nor is it desirable that they should be so purchased.

With regard to Captain O'Connell's evidence, that the high minimum price had driven all the large purchasers of land out of the market, it is remarked,—

Had Captain O'Connell been asked who were the large class of purchasers alluded to, he would probably have answered, the speculators between the years 1835 and 1841, the persons, in fact, who have been all ruined by their speculations.

With reference to the argument 5s. an acre is high enough for a minimum price, if not too high, the Governor says,—

This argument is correct, as far as ordinary land purchased for grazing purposes is concerned; but land never ought to be bought and never will be again bought in large quantities, for the purposes of grazing only. This is what is kept out of sight throughout the whole of this Report, and this sole fact renders the whole Report fallacious.

In allusion to the argument, that the high price of land had stopped the tide of Emigration to the shores of the colony, it is remarked—

Emigration has been stopped by other causes; and, under the squatting system, the boundless territory spoken of is made available to the uses of man. The thing the colony really wants is an amended and well regulated system of squatting.

In regard to the argument that the system of a high price of land must injure the colony in a tenfold degree, when it was considered with what greater advantages and greater cheapness land could be purchased in other colonies, His Excellency has the following note:—

The same fallacy again:—Were the upset price reduced even to 2s., it would still be too high for a squatter, who requires the use of 200,000 or even 500,000 acres. Lord Stanley in a despatch addressed to the Governor of Western Australia, under date of the 17th August, 1843, states, "that in all the Australian colonies, it must long remain indispensable to provide for pastoral pursuits, by a well-regulated system of licenses to depasture flocks over the unappropriated lands of the Crown."

The Committee here misquote the 9th clause of the Act: the Governor has no such power under it as is described. (The points of raising and lowering the upset price at discretion.) Perhaps, however, the Committee intended to quote the 11th clause, which gives to the Governor powers in respect to town, suburban, and special lots, which it is very essential he should possess.

Of the three places mentioned (Alexandria and the old South Head Road,) two are in the neighbourhood of Sydney; the third, Kiama, is a place at which, during the height of the land mania, the most absurd prices were given for land. The course pursued by the Government in respect to the upset price of these lands, all of which were either town, suburban, or special allotments, was precisely that which any private proprietor would have followed, who had lands which he desired to sell. The upset price (or what an ordinary auctioneer would call the reserved price) was a little below what it was supposed the land would sell for.

The importance of the squatting regulations is fully acknowledged in my despatch to the Secretary of State of the 3rd April. The establishment of a well-regulated system of squatting is the most important subject ever brought forward in the colony; and consequently ample notice was given of the contemplated changes, and time allowed for a reference on every important point to Her Majesty's Government.

The most essential object of the Crown Lands Occupation Act was, and still continues to be, the obtaining a method of removing or ejecting an unauthorised occupant of Crown Lands (or a squatter) by more expeditious means than the ordinary forms of law require: the first clause in the Act is the one which is really essential.

The right to raise a revenue from the land is not in any way whatever derived from the Squatting Act, or any colonial enactment. The local legislature is expressly prohibited from legislating in respect to the Crown lands.

In this impression (the impression that the claim of the Executive to raise a revenue from Crown Lands without consulting the Legislature) the Committee is, I believe, at variance with every constitutional lawyer who has considered the subject,—entirely at variance with Crown lawyers of England who were consulted on the subject in 1839.

With reference to the paragraph in the Report which has reference to the effect of the Statute 1st Victoria c. 2, s. 2, and to the title of the Crown to Waste Lands, his Excellency says,—

There is so much confusion in this paragraph, that it is difficult to set it right. The ordinance, 2 Victoria No. 27, does not apply to any purposes whatever sums raised for the use of the land. The sums raised for the use of the land are raised and applied by right of ownership, precisely in the same way as any private proprietor raises and applies his rent, with this sole exception, that they are applied to public purposes, instead of private ones. The sums really raised under the 2 Victoria No. 27, are taxes, and as such are properly applied by the local legislature to purposes named in the Act. The Committee are in error in supposing that any portion of the sums raised under this Local Act could be claimed for the Consolidated Fund, under the Civil List Act of the 1 Victoria, c. 2. According to the strict letter of the Civil List Act, the rents or fees on licenses raised altogether independently of any Act of the local legislature, might, I believe, be claimed for the Consolidated Fund, though not the assessment; and it is, I believe, only in consequence of the forbearance of Parliament, and the extreme tenderness with which the rights of the colonists have ever been regarded by the Imperial Government and Parliament, that they are not so claimed.

Although I attach no importance to the argument respecting the right of depasturing on the lord's common, it may be observed, that what the squatters enjoy is not a right of commonage, but an exclusive right of possession; good for an indefinite period against all intruders, and good even against the Crown itself for the period of a year.

The assertion in the note prefixed to the Returns, (Returns of the largest and smallest occupiers of Crown lands in each district beyond the boundaries) is perfectly correct; and I must maintain, that the fallacy is in the argument of the Committee. The return is one of what the squatters pay to the Crown for the use of the Crown lands—or, in other words, of what they pay to the Crown for the depasturing of their sheep and cattle, and is perfectly distinct from what the occupiers may pay to the local revenue for the support of a police force. The two payments are perfectly distinct—made to different parties—and payable under different authorities, as distinct as is the rent payable to his landlord by the tenant of a house in Regent-street, from the payment made by the same individual towards the support of the metropolitan police.

There is only, I believe, one person in the colony who pays for so many as nine licenses, and that person is the representative of a company. The note applies to persons holding the most land, or feeding the most stock under single licenses; and consequently persons who hold more than one license are properly not taken into account in it.

Whether these persons (persons holding a few head of cattle only) be squatters or not, in the sense attached to the word by the Committee, is unimportant, they hold licenses under the Squatting Act, and contribute to the land revenue £10 per annum each; the object of the returns and of the explanatory note prefixed to them is to show how unequally the occupiers of Crown lands pay for the lands they occupy, and this is done incontrovertibly.

The object is not to show what should be paid by bona fide squatters, but to show how unequally people actually do pay; how many of the small squatters cultivate land, and so do large squatters; the latter not unfrequently even sublet the Crown land.

Whether or not the license fee was at first intended to be a payment for the use of the land, it now ought to be considered as such; it is principally because the license fee is not a fair payment for the land that the whole system of squatting requires revision and amendment.

They (the Squatting Regulations) do not pre-suppose a survey; they are expressly shaped so as to avoid the necessity of a survey, at least of any other survey than such a one as has been recently made by one of the Commissioners (Mr. Tyers) in the course of a few weeks; the only survey required is that of the homestead proposed to be purchased, a survey, that is to say, of 320 acres.

In allusion to the paragraph in the Report which states what the Committee conceive to be the only practical principle of defining stations, the Governor makes the following remarks:—

The regulations of the 2nd April are founded precisely on the principles herein approved by the Committee; but the regulations of the 2nd April contain only a small portion of the system recommended by me for the occupation of Crown lands.

The right of the Crown must remain absolute over its own property; it is not pretended or expected that the regulations will give satisfaction to persons whose avowed object is to get fixity of tenure without paying for it; a fixed tenure is undoubtedly to be preferred to a precarious one; but in no part of the world can a fixed tenure be obtained without paying for it.

In reference to the Committee's remarks as to the fixed price per acre of land tending to establish the pernicious principle that one thing is purchased nominally and another really—that is to say, that where even 5s. an acre was given for land, the main inducement was water frontage or back run, His Excellency says,—

There is truth in this, and therein lies one of the main difficulties which we have to encounter in devising any system of sale for pastoral lands; but it does not thence follow that the Crown lands are to be seized on, or the management of them taken out of the hands of the Crown; it confirms, however, the opinion which I constantly maintain, viz., that lands which are fit only for pastoral purposes ought not to be sold at all, at least, not sold for many years to come, and sold only in small quantities as homesteads.

To a person unacquainted with New South Wales, nothing would appear more equitable than if a proprietor allow his cattle to stray off his own land and on to his neighbour's, he should be compelled to make some compensation to his neighbour, or enter into some agreement with his neighbour, in order that his cattle so straying might not be molested, driven back, or impounded. But in New South Wales, the neighbour is very frequently (generally, indeed it may be said) the Crown; the neighbouring lands are Crown lands, and the laws of the colony made by landed proprietors have been so framed (especially the impounding laws) as to exempt Crown lands from the protection which is afforded to lands the property of individuals. It is avowedly a part of my plan for the management of the Crown lands of the territory, to give to Crown lands the same protection in respect to the impounding of cattle as is enjoyed by private proprietors; but the law at present does not give it to them.

The price (the rent of a section of 640 acres within the boundaries) was raised from £1 to £5, not in 1839, but by a government notice, dated February 15, 1840, when the land mania was at its greatest height; the price of £1 was then decidedly too low, and the price to which it was raised (£5) may be admitted, at present, to be too high. The falling off in the revenue is not solely to be attributed to the rise in the price; the same causes which have produced a falling off in other branches of the territorial revenue would have produced a falling off in this, even though the upset price had remained unaltered. There has always been enmity between the large and the small squatters, and more within the boundaries of location than beyond them.

With regard to the remarks of the Committee, that he who has purchased land from the Crown is avowedly made the subject of an odious and vexatious system, His Excellency says,—

Not of an odious or vexatious system, but of one which is prudent and just, requiring people to pay for the support of Government, or for the maintenance of immigration, in a fair and just proportion to the advantages which they derive from the use of the Crown lands. In the present system there is much undoubtedly that is odious and vexatious; and nothing, perhaps, more so, than the way in which poor squatters are first branded with the name of cattle-stealers, and then expelled or hunted down by the more wealthy intruders.

The powers of the Commissioners beyond the boundaries are undoubtedly very great; but if they are abused in any manner, my experience leads me to suppose it is in favouring the large squatters, rather than in any other way. The Commissioners are the stewards of the Crown, and may be compared to the stewards of any great landed proprietor. Persons in such situations will always, and of necessity, possess power and influence. I do not object to the intervention of a jury in cases wherein squatters only are concerned amongst themselves; but I do distinctly object to submit any question, in which the rights of the Crown are concerned, to a jury of squatters.

In regard to the observations of the Committee upon the best mode of settling disputes with reference to stations, &c.; and the operations of the Crown Lands Occupation Act, His Excellency has the following note:—

Upon these questions I am entirely at issue with the Committee, in matters of fact as well as of right. My despatch of the 7th November, 1838, respecting the protest of two of the Judges, will distinctly show that I claimed the licenses as Crown revenue, when the Act 2 Victoria, No. 27, was passed.

I agree with the Committee in thinking the time to be arrived, when a free police should be substituted for the convict police; and the change is, in fact, already in progress. I cannot, however, place too implicit a reliance on the evidence of Major Nunn as to the facility with which the services of soldiers belonging to regiments in the colony could be obtained; there are, evidently, persons of higher authority who must be consulted.

I am glad to find that the Committee entertain this good opinion of the native police.

On the subject of the social and moral evils of the present system of squatting, I have fully expressed my opinion in my despatch to the Secretary of State of the 3rd April, 1844; and they differ very little from those herein set forth by the Committee. Vide Paper ordered to be printed 1st May, 1845, No. 267.—II., p. 2.

The existence of quit-rents on so many different scales, varying from 2s. to 16s. 8d. per 100 acres, is undoubtedly an evil; as is also the remissness of Government in not having regularly collected quit-rents; and any equitable adjustment by which they could be extinguished, would be a great boon to the colony. I am, however, scarcely prepared to support the proposal of the Committee in respect to the cancellation of arrears, which would not get rid of quit-rents, whilst it would hold out encouragement to all persons to get again into arrears in the hope that at some future period they would be again wiped off in a similar manner. It should be borne in mind, that the quit-rents form the only security immediately available for the payment of the debentures issued, or to be issued, to the amount of about £100,000 for the purposes of immigration.

With reference to the opinion expressed by the Committee, that no thorough remedy for the Crown Lands Grievances can be provided until the whole of the revenue arising from those lands be carried to the account of the ordinary revenue, and the management of these lands be placed under the control of the Governor and the Legislative Council, His Excellency says,—

The object of the Committee is here distinctly stated, viz., to get the whole management of the lands of the colony into its own hands.

On the subject of the alleged compact, (the compact with Sir Richard Bourke) the local Government has afforded all the information which it can give. It is from the Lords of the Treasury and the Colonial Office that further answers must be sought to the charges of bad faith and disingenuousness, which are herein made against them by the Committee. As this charge, however, against Her Majesty's Government of a breach of faith must be considered in a very serious point of view, I have prepared a "Memorandum on the Financial System of New South Wales," which will, I trust, show on how very slight grounds so serious an accusation has been framed.

I have distinctly shown, that notwithstanding the unguarded expressions contained in Sir Richard Bourke's minute to the Legislative Council, of July, 1835, his practice during the two years and upwards which he afterwards remained in the Government was precisely the same as mine; and his views the same, with the exception, however, that he carried much farther than I have done, the right of the Crown to dispose of the territorial revenue independently of the Council. See, particularly, his despatch of the 7th of September, 1837, in respect to Mr. Moore.

These passages (passages bearing reference to the compact with Sir Richard Bourke) show, that the Committee misunderstands the financial affairs of the colony. The utmost cordiality did exist between the Legislative and Executive authorities, until demands were made by the Council which I believe to be inconsistent with the position in which the colony is placed, as a part of the British empire, or as a dependency of the British Crown. I know of no such endless or complicated accounts as are by the Committee supposed to exist, nor of any endeavours on the part of the Government to shift items from one division of the revenue to the other. The Executive Government cannot by possibility emancipate itself from the control of the representatives of the people, by shifting items from the Crown revenue to the ordinary revenue of the colony; though by the reverse of the operation, that is to say, by shifting them from the ordinary revenue to that of the Crown, it might do so, were not the Governor precluded by the most positive orders from charging any expenses on the Crown revenue save those of immigration, the aborigines, and the management of the property of the Crown. It is the home Government alone, and not the local Government, which can direct the expenditure of a part of the Crown revenue on any other objects than one of these three. The Council has indeed forced the home Government to authorise the local Government to expend a portion of the Crown revenue on the survey department, and the result is, that the survey department is now placed (and for the first time since there has been a Legislative Council in the colony) beyond the control of the Legislature. The Legislative Council is, moreover, now seeking to force the local Government to spend a portion of the land fund on the administration of justice; and if it succeed in doing this, the effect of it will be to divest the Legislative Council itself of the control which it now indirectly exercises over the whole expenditure for the administration of justice, in consequence of the insufficiency of the provision made for it by Schedule A, of 5 and 6 Victoria, c. 76. But the Council I believe, only does those things from the want of a correct knowledge of the financial system of the colony; the system which I have endeavoured to explain in a separate paper.

I shall make no alterations in the regulations until I receive instructions from Her Majesty's Government.

I cannot consent to the abolition or reduction (of the License fees) proposed.

Whether or not I can give my consent to a Bill repealing or altering the Squatting Act must depend on the nature of the provisions which may be introduced into it. There are many points in which the Squatting Act might be amended, especially the portion of the 9th clause (introduced into it in 1839, against my will), which allows Commissioners of Crown Lands to hold stations, and have stock within their districts.

I have no objection to these proposals, (for the establishment of benches of magistrates beyond the boundaries) provided the assessment be sufficient to meet the expenses of them, in addition to the support of the police.

I have no authority to remit, or give up money due to the Crown.

I have no objection to this (the conveyance of mines to the grantees of Crown lands): it is in fact already done, except only in respect to mines of silver and gold.

Extract of a letter from London, dated 9th August, 1845:—"The next Wool Sales occur in September. The weather continues very wet, and we are really apprehensive of our harvest. Money is decidedly getting tighter, which is a sure criterion that alarm is abroad. The effect of a deficient harvest would be severely felt on the next season's wool sales." Extract of a letter from Liverpool, dated 20th August, 1845:—"By auction, yesterday, tallow from £39 to £41 per ton; hoofs, £6 15s. per ton; bones, £6 5s. per ton; 22s. for 123 ox and cow horns, and 2¼d. to 2½d. for ox and cow hides, wet salted, but a little damaged; hides, if sent wet, ought to be carefully put up and well salted. In good condition they are worth 3½d. per lb." Extract of a letter dated Liverpool, 22nd August, 1845:—"The wool sales are going on this day. The prices of the two previous days' sales have been well sustained. The weather for these two days now has been very fine, and there seems a fair probability of its remaining so for some time. This will operate favourably in keeping up the price of wool, but it will moderate our anticipations as to the prospects of the wheat market for the coming year. Should the harvest be well got in, there will still be above an average crop, a greater breadth of land having been devoted to corn than ever has been in this country before, and the application of the guano manure rendering the fields more productive." Extract of a letter dated Liverpool, 23rd August, 1845:—"Our Wool Sales commenced on the 21st, and as far as colonial is concerned, terminated last night. The attendance was very large, and the prices obtained fully equal to the last London ones, indeed for middling qualities higher rates were paid. The weather, which had previously been very bad, kept fine during the two days of the sales, and, strange to say, it is snowing again to-day. There was a considerable quantity of Port Phillip wool sold, the condition was good, and it averaged about 1s. 10d. It was chiefly combing, which was wanted, and commanded extreme prices. The Sydney wool was much better than last season. The South Australian wools were not so well got up. The sales are considered to have gone off remarkably well."—Port Phillip Herald.

The Rain.—Intelligence has reached Sydney that the refreshing and invigorating rains which visited Sydney have also visited the Campbelltown, Liverpool, Parramatta, Windsor, and adjacent districts.

Moreton Bay.—During a violent thunder-storm on the 29th November, the hospital at Moreton Bay was struck by lightning, and a table, on which was a large quantity of drugs, was knocked down, and the drugs set on fire. Fortunately the Doctor saw, from his house, the light in the dispensary, and the fire was extinguished without much damage being done to the building; but the whole of the drugs were destroyed.

Camperdown Cottage.—We are requested to remind gentlemen desirous of a suburban retreat, that the sale of this handsome cottage takes place at the rooms of Mr. Blackman, this day, at twelve o'clock.—Communicated.

Sale at Mr. Lyons's Mart, This Day.—We are requested to remind wine and spirit merchants, breeders of cattle, and the public generally, of the sale which takes place this day, at Mr. Lyons's Mart, at eleven o'clock, full particulars of which will be seen on reference to our advertising columns.—Communicated.

Mr. Fawcett begs to impress upon intending purchasers the advantage of an early attendance at his sale by auction, at the stores of Mr James Simmons, Pitt street, this day, when the whole of his extensive assortment of slops and drapery goods will be submitted to unreserved competition, to close shipments by late arrivals.—Communicated.

Police Court Business.—Tuesday.—There were eight cases on the drunkards' list—four women and four men, each of the women were ordered to pay 11s. or be confined in the cells for twenty-four hours; of the men, two were discharged, one paid 11s., and one for not paying 11s. was ordered to the cells for twenty-four hours. There were five remanded cases on the list of miscellaneous charges, four of which were again remanded, and Elizabeth Barnett for stealing an ox tongue was discharged, the proof of stealing being defective. There were ten new cases on the same list, viz.:—Ann Williams alias Mullins for a breach of the peace, discharged at the request of the prosecutor; Ellen Donnelly v. Dudley, for an assault, also discharged at the request of the prosecutor; David Higgins for a breach of the peace, was discharged, there being no prosecutor; Catherine Dougherty for an assault, was ordered to pay 40s, and 4s. 6d. costs, or to go fourteen days to gaol; William Stephenson for stealing bark, and John Rossick on suspicion of stealing £4 12s., were both remanded: Peter Rush for being drunk and guilty of an assault, was fined 40s. and costs, in default of payment to be confined in gaol for one month; Ann Weir for being drunk and disorderly, and George Kershaw for an assault, were both bound over to good behaviour in £10, and sureties in £5 each; Thomas Kirkwood, Surgeon of the Surprise, whaler, for stealing a Kater's compass in 1844, from Mr. Pendray, was committed for trial. This last case being heard in the private room before Mr. Alderman Holden, none of the particulars are known. There was but one case on the summons list, for a breach of the Police Act, by riding furiously through the streets of the city, which was postponed.

The Fight.—Yesterday morning, a large assemblage of the boxing fraternity met on some ground on the north side of Middle Harbour, for the purpose of seeing a fight come off between Hough and Haddigaddy, both natives of the colony. Haddigaddy was beaten in seventeen rounds.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

(From our various Correspondents.)

PARRAMATTA.

Horse-stealing.—A man named Patrick M'Cann, a native of the colony, was on Saturday committed for trial for this offence.

The late Forgery.—A brief notice was given in the Sydney Morning Herald of Saturday, of a prisoner of the Crown being in custody on suspicion of being the alterer of the cheque passed on the Messrs. Byrnes, of this town. The evidence, however, has not been sufficient to substantiate any charge against him. The Chief Constable's testimony, however, is valuable, as showing what description of characters are allowed by the Hyde Park Barrack authorities (to which establishment the prisoner, whose name is Gray, was attached) to remain in Sydney. Ryan deposed that, from information he received, he apprehended the prisoner at Hyde Park Barracks, for being the forger of the cheque alluded to. On taking him in custody, he asked him if he was in the General Hospital in 1843, and if he knew a man named Gilbert or Grant; when he (Gray) answered he did not, but was acquainted with two seafaring men who laid near him in the Hospital, and described their personal appearance, one of which answered that of Grant or Gilbert (the utterer of the cheque); and the other answered that of a man named Simmons, who is connected with Grant. Gray then admitted having lately seen Grant, and been at his lodgings, to which he stated he had been asked by that person for the purpose of having a glass of grog; which admission agreed with the information Ryan had previously received. In the course of conversation, Gray stated he was transported to the colony in 1835 for forgery, and had since been committed from Port Macquarie for a similar offence there, but acquitted in consequence of a material witness being mad. He was then sent to Hyde Park Barracks, where he was implicated in another forgery, but as sufficient evidence could not be collected to convict him before a Jury—although he owned to Ryan he had the forged document in his possession—he was on this occasion sent to Cockatoo; but, as it appeared, on his removal from that place he was allowed to remain in Sydney. The prisoner slightly cross-examined Ryan on his statement, and stated that in the Port Macquarie case there were five witnesses in Sydney who could have proved he never saw the cheque, and that in the Sydney case it was a man named Phillips who committed the forgery, and that in the present matter his meeting with Grant was quite accidental, having fallen in with him while he was out from the Ordnance Stores, where he (Gray) was employed to get some sand; and that Grant insisted on his coming to his lodgings and having a glass of grog, but that he was not with him beyond four minutes. The Police Magistrate said, that although from the statements of Grant, which was borne out by the circumstances that had transpired, there could be but little doubt of his guilt; yet the legal proof was insufficient. He should, however, in returning him to Hyde Park Barracks, forward a copy of the deposition, in order that he might be disposed of as His Excellency thought proper.

A Slight Difference.—Two prisoners attached to the Domain, were brought before the Court on suspicion of stealing a box and its contents, belonging to the dairy-man from the dairy store. The apprehending constable gave evidence that the loser complained to him of the loss of clothes and money to between £40 and £50. On the party himself being put in the box, he deposed to the loss of a few clothes, a few shillings, and some small articles of jewellery. The Bench and constable appeared amazed at the prevarication, and the witness was questioned, when it came out that he stated that the trinkets being some gifts and some heir-looms, he would not have lost them for £40 or £50; and the constable in his eagerness had given the loser's personal estimate for the intrinsic one.

A Knotty Case for Decision.—The Police Court was occupied an hour or two on three separate days, in an attempt to award justice in the following case: Two prisoners, one attached to the District Council, and the other to the Commissariat, were placed at the bar for the theft of a thermometer, from the verandah of the house of Mr. Sales, in Macquarie-street in this town. A highly respectable tradesman, a watchmaker, named Hancock, stated that one of the prisoners, named Parr, called on him and offered him the article in question for sale, when, having been informed by [illegible] Yates of his loss, he gave him into custody. Parr then stated he bought it from the second prisoner. A man named Wilson who told him he got it from an officer; Hancock also added that Parr on selling it [illegible] mentioned he would account for its being "right;" Wilson was then taken into custody who at first denied having been at the Lumber-yard, or seeing Parr at all, and the other admitted having been to him respecting the purchase of a ring, but asserted most positively he knew nothing about the thermometer. Parr then called a third prisoner, who swore he saw Parr lose a shilling on the ground, having the thermometer at the time in his hand, and that the coin was picked up by Wilson. Two more prisoners deposed that they heard the previous witness say in the course of some conversation in the Lumber-yard respecting the affair "that he knew nothing about it." In this labyrinth of doubt, recourse was had to the corporal in charge of the Commissariat department, to learn whether the prisoner Wilson was absent at the time of the alleged sale from his stables, where he ought to have been, but nothing conclusive was elicited, and a like result attended the examination of one of the mounted police, whose stable adjoined the prisoner Wilson's; and evidence was then called as to the character of the witness who had deposed to the tossing and picking up of the shilling, and who stated that from pretty close observation of this man for no inconsiderable period, he would not believe his oath; and that he had passed since his arrival in the colony more time on the treadmill than in any other establishment. From this conflicting testimony it was wholly impossible to discover which was the thief, the bench met the case by dealing with the prisoners for irregularity of conduct, of which both had been guilty. Parr, by being absent from his post as gatekeeper at the Lumber-yard, and Wilson, for being there, where he had no business to be, and they were each sentenced [illegible] days to the cells, and to be returned to Hyde Park Barracks.

GOULBURN.

December 6.—I am glad to say that Edward Ellis, a bolter from an iron gang, and who has been giving information relative to an important case of murder and robbery, but who got out of the hands of our constabulary at Gundagai, has again been apprehended; he was taken at the lower station on the Murrumbidgee, and is now at Yass, in a wretched state, having received a wound right through the abdomen, which we believe he received from the black who took him.

We understand that one of the cheques stolen by Biddal, from the Yass mail, on the 20th October, and which was specially indorsed with red ink, has been paid at one of the Banks in Sydney, after the advertisement announcing it as being one of those stolen on the occasion had appeared in the Herald. By some chemical process or other means the special indorsement has been completely effaced, and coming through respectable parties to the Bank, in the hurry of business it was paid without being detected. But for the information of the public, it is well that they should understand, that when cheques and orders are stolen, payment should be stopped at the Bank, or where they are made payable, either by the drawer or those who specially indorse them, as well as advertising, which no doubt prevents them from being negociated; but in addition to this payment should be stopped, as we have noticed.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Gentlemen,—In the report of this day's [illegible] of cases at the Police Office, you state [illegible] Abrahams against J. G. Cohen, for assault, dismissed, proof defective, which is not correct, inasmuch as it leaves an impression in the [illegible] that I have really been assaulting the [illegible] Abrahams, (an imputation I should [illegible] labour under,) whereas the facts of the case are these:—The plaintiff caused a disturbance in the auction room during the time I was selling on Wednesday last, I then ordered him out, and he refused to go; being obliged to employ force, which he successfully resisted, I was compelled to give up the business of the day.

He subsequently obtained a warrant against me for an assault, which was forthwith dismissed, the Magistrate deciding there was no case, as a man was not to be wantonly disturbed in his own house and business, however the words public room or auction might lead people to think otherwise.

The frequent annoyances that auctioneers are subjected to in this way, makes it imperative that some means should be adopted to suppress them—as injurious to the public as well as themselves.

This being a fair account of the case, I rely on your impartiality for its insertion, and

Subscribe myself, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN G. COHEN.

ENGLISH NEWS.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.
HOUSE OF LORDS, AUGUST 9.

The House of Lords was thrown open this (Saturday) morning about twelve o'clock, and in a very short period the galleries and body of the house were filled with ladies. The attendance of the fairer portion of the creation was very numerous, and the proportion of young and beautiful women was much larger than usual; their dresses were exceedingly elegant, but neatness was the "distinguishing characteristic." At half-past twelve o'clock the Earl of Shaftesbury, preceded by the mace, arrived, and took his seat on the woolsack. Prayers were then read by the Bishop of Ely, the Earl of Shaftesbury kneeling with his face towards the Throne. About a quarter to one the Duke of Wellington arrived. His Grace was dressed in the uniform of a field marshal, and appeared in remarkably high spirits and excellent health. The Lord Chancellor immediately followed, and took his seat on the woolsack.

Dwarkanauth Tagore, accompanied by his son and nephew, subsequently entered the House, and after shaking hands and conversing with the Duke of Wellington, the Lord Chancellor, and other noble personages, was conducted to the Peers' Gallery, on the left of the Throne. A rapid succession of arrivals of Peers in their robes ensued, amongst whom we observed the Duke of Cambridge, as usual, in exuberant spirits, and looking in capital health; Prince George, the Earl of St. Germans, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Marquis of Clanricarde, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Earl of Zetland, Lord Wharncliffe (habited in the Windsor uniform), the Earl of Lincoln, Lord Monteagle, Lord Glenelg, Lord Holland, Lord Campbell, Lord Stanley, Lord Grantley, Lord [illegible], &c., &c.

There was the usual attendance of Foreign Ambassadors and Diplomatists.

The Marquis of Clanricarde brought up the report of the select committee on the London and York Railway Bill.

The arrival of her Majesty was made known by the discharge of cannon at ten minutes before two, and at the expiration of a few minutes she entered the house, preceded by the Great Officers of the Household, and leaning on the arm of Prince Albert, the Duke of Wellington bearing the Sword of State. Her Majesty having taken her seat on the Throne, commanded the lords and ladies assembled to be seated. Her Majesty was superbly attired, and had her brow encircled by a [illegible] of diamonds.

The Usher of the Black Rod having summoned the Commons, the Speaker and about thirty members appeared at the bar.

The Speaker then addressed her Majesty at some length, in a speech which recounted the business of the session. The right honourable gentleman concluded by presenting to her Majesty, for her Royal assent, the Exchequer Bills Bill, and Consolidated Fund Bill, and the Appropriation of Supplies Bill.

The Royal assent was then given to these and several other Bills.

The Lord Chancellor, advancing to the Throne, delivered to her Majesty her Royal Speech, which she proceeded to read, with her usual clear and graceful enunciation:—

My Lords and Gentlemen,—

I rejoice that the state of public business enables me to release you from further attendance in Parliament.

In closing this laborious session I must express to you my warm acknowledgments for the zeal and assiduity with which you have applied yourselves to the consideration of many subjects deeply affecting the public interests.

I have given my cordial assent to the bills which you presented to me for remitting the duties on many articles of import, and for removing restrictions on the application of capital and skill to certain branches of our manufactures.

The reduction of taxation will necessarily cause an immediate loss of revenue; but I trust that its effect, in stimulating commercial enterprise, and enlarging the means of consumption, will ultimately provide an ample compensation for any temporary sacrifice.

I have witnessed with peculiar satisfaction the unremitting attention which you have bestowed on the [illegible] commencement of the session, for improving and extending the means of academical education in Ireland.

You may rely upon my determination to carry those measures into execution in the manner best calculated to inspire confidence in the institutions which have received your sanction, and to give effect to your earnest desire to promote the welfare of that part of my dominions.

From all foreign powers I continue to receive assurances of their friendly disposition towards this country.

The Convention which I have recently concluded with the King of the French for the more effectual suppression of the Slave Trade will, I trust, by establishing a cordial and active co-operation between the two Powers, afford a better prospect than has hitherto existed of complete success in the attainment of an object for which this country has made so many sacrifices.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,—

I thank you for the liberality with which you have voted the supplies for the service of the current year.

My Lords and Gentlemen,—

On your return to your several counties, duties will devolve upon you scarcely less important than those from the performance of which I now relieve you.

I feel assured that you will promote and confirm by your influence and example, that spirit of loyalty and contentment, which you will find generally prevalent throughout the country.

In the discharge of all the functions intrusted to you for the public welfare, you may confidently rely on my cordial support; and I implore the blessing of Divine Providence on our united efforts to encourage the industry and increase the comforts of my people, and to inculcate those religious and moral principles which are the surest foundation of our security and happiness.

Having read the Speech, and returned it to the Lord Chancellor, that noble and learned Lord said, "My Lords and Gentlemen,—It is her Majesty's Royal will and pleasure, that this Parliament be prorogued to Thursday, the 2nd day of October, and this Parliament is accordingly prorogued to Thursday, the 2nd day of October next."

Her Majesty then, bowing to the assembled Lords and Commons, descended from the throne, and accompanied by her Royal Consort and the Great Officers of State, and the Officers of the Household, retired in the same order in which she had entered.

EMBARKATION OF HER MAJESTY.

THE Royal cortège left Buckingham-palace shortly after four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, and passing through Pimlico and over Vauxhall-bridge, proceeded at a rapid rate towards Woolwich, where the royal yacht and her consort, the Black Eagle, lay in readiness to convey the royal party to Antwerp.

At twelve minutes past five o'clock the royal cortège, consisting of three carriages and four, with outriders, and accompanied by a detachment of the 4th Light Dragoons, dashed into the Dock-yard. The word of command was given, the soldiers presented arms, the two bands commenced playing the National Anthem, and three tremendous cheers and the thunder of the cannon announced to the Queen her presence in the midst of thousands of her subjects. Her Majesty, upon alighting, was received by the Earl of Haddington, the Earl of Aberdeen, Earl Delawarr, Earl Jersey, Sir W. Gage, Sir Francis Collier, and Lieutenant-General Lord Bloomfield. Her Majesty, who looked extremely well, and appeared to be in most excellent spirits, was attired in a dress of purple shot silk, a black satin mantle, and straw cottage bonnet, trimmed with striped blue ribbon.

The Queen was conducted to her barge by the Earl of Haddington, Lord Aberdeen, the Lord Chamberlain, and the Lord Steward, and accompanied by Prince Albert, the Earl of Aberdeen, and Lady Canning and the Countess of Gainsborough, ladies in waiting. Sir Francis Collier had the honour of steering her Majesty.

Her Majesty was speedily rowed alongside the royal yacht, which was moored a short distance off; and, the royal standard being hoisted at the main, the noble vessel weighed anchor and proceeded down the river. Opposite the Royal arsenal, where the artillery and sappers and miners were drawn up to welcome their royal mistress, another park of artillery gave forth its boisterous welcome, and cheers arose from windows, balconies, and house-tops along the river-side, where the population had congregated to witness the pageant. The Black Eagle and the Porcupine followed in the wake of the Albert and Victoria.

At Erith and Greenhithe the shore and jetties were lined with spectators, who hailed the royal party with the most hearty demonstrations of loyal regard. At half-past six the royal yacht passed Tilbury-fort, which also fired a royal salute; and at Gravesend the piers were crowded with thousands of human beings, who crowded down to witness the royal progress. The scene here was somewhat enlivened by the previous arrival of the Satellite, steamer, from London-bridge, crowded with passengers, who set up a groan of intense dissatisfaction at the captain, who had kept them during the entire voyage at a most provoking distance from the royal yacht.

At this point, the river not being much crowded with shipping, the royal yacht rapidly increased her speed, and in less than half an hour reached Sea Reach, where she anchored for the night.

HER MAJESTY'S PROGRESS IN GERMANY.

WE reported in our last her Majesty's embarkation at Woolwich for the continent, and the progress of the royal yacht to her anchorage at Sea Reach, where she remained during Saturday night. Her Majesty resumed her progress at an early hour on the following morning, the wind blowing half a gale; and the whole voyage from the Thames to the Scheldt was marked throughout by equally unpropitious weather. The royal yacht, however, made a most excellent passage; and her Majesty and Prince Albert promenaded the deck during the greater part of the trip, enjoying the sea breeze.

At Antwerp, long before the hour at which it was expected her Majesty would arrive, and despite the unpropitious weather, the people congregated, a living and moving mass of variegated colours, under the trees which line the quay and shore. A long array of carriages, of all sorts, sizes, and shapes, formed a sort of background to the motley throng, which again assumed a new and amusing aspect when, a shower coming on, a perfect sea of umbrellas was raised over it, veiling from view the motley groups who crowded, laughing and chattering, under the temporary shelter. The Scheldt, for once, looked lively.

Shortly before 6 o'clock the thundering of the cannon from the forts on the river announced the appearance of the royal yacht, and soon after the paddle-boxes of the Victoria and Albert were seen in the distance over the flat shores of the river by the crowd assembled on the quay, and her Majesty was discovered seated on the deck between the Countess of Gainsborough and Viscountess Canning, Prince Albert, dressed in a white coat and a cap with a gold border, standing near her.

The Victoria and Albert having anchored for the night in the middle of the stream, Sir Hamilton Seymour, British Minister to the Court of Brussels, Baron Arnim, the Prussian Minister, Count D'Have de Steenhuse (charged with the compliments of the King of the Belgians), and others, went on board and paid their respects to her Majesty. As night advanced, the crowds of spectators gradually diminished, a few remaining to the last moment, in order, apparently, to view the illuminations on the landing-place, (which were not, however, very brilliant, as the wind was too high, and the weather too rainy,) or the brilliant lights in the state cabin of the yacht, and fore and aft.

The disembarkation took place at seven o'clock on Monday morning. The Victoria and Albert ran alongside the pier, and her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Earl of Aberdeen, with their suite, landed, and were received by Sir H. Seymour and the civil and military authorities, and, entering the carriage, were in a few minutes en route. Their passing through the city, on the way to the railway station, was a scene of no little animation and picturesque beauty. The streets of Antwerp, like those of many of the towns in Belgium, wind and turn, and turn and wind, and the combinations produced by the endless turnings of the streets,—the quaint old houses, six or seven stories high, tapering up to a pinnacle, with their fronts all adorned with the luxuriant tracery which characterizes the buildings erected in Flanders by the Spaniards,—strongly contrasted with the gay-looking modern population with which they were thronged as the cortège drove through, and presenting a most grotesque appearance, leading the mind to dwell on the times past, when the broad-built, leather-jerkined, casqued soldiers of Alva frowned grim terror among the crouching people, now free and happy.

The royal party were received at the railway station by the officials of the company and the 10th Regiment of Lancers, the band playing our national anthem; and in a few minutes the train was in motion towards Malines, a carriage being attached to the train for the especial use of the representatives of the London Press. At Malines the King and Queen of the Belgians, attended by their suite, joined the royal travellers. At Louvain there was a repetition of the tasteful welcome which had been offered on arriving at Malines; and here also the assembled crowds gave their customary quiet, but "ideally," enthusiastic welcome. A travelling Englishman, not satisfied, however, set up at once the national hurrah, or rather, in his fashion, the "hooray!" but the chorus was very faint. Our Englishman again set up his cheer, waving his hat most energetically; and at last elicited a hearty cheer, which seemed to delight him intensely. The train then proceeded onwards, and arrived at the remarkable station of Ans, the gradient of which, being between 400 and 500 feet above the level of Meuse, is so steep that the locomotive engines cannot be used, and the train was, therefore, drawn by ropes up and down two inclined planes, each about two miles and a half long. The view obtained from the height,—the town of Liege, lying in a valley below, and embosomed in hills of more than common beauty,—was one of unequalled beauty, its charms being enhanced by the long expanse of flat, unvaried country through which previously the train had passed. The town itself is in many of its features very similar to our large manufacturing towns, with the advantage of a much finer position. The smoke of the factories rises above the mass of houses; but what would be destructive to all ideas of the picturesque in any other position becomes here almost an additional beauty from the contrast it affords to the smiling verdure of the valley of the Meuse and the fir-crowned hills around. Here also another enthusiastic welcome awaited her Majesty.

Proceeding onwards from Liege to Verviers a perfect panorama of picturesque objects, valleys, woodlands, and streams greeted the eye, affording a foretaste of the beauties of the Rhine, while at every chateau and at every dwelling-place, however humble, by the way-side, were to be seen the smiling faces of the fair country women and the fine broad figures of their male compatriots. As the train approached nearer and nearer to the Prussian frontier, the characteristics of the people became sensibly different in costume as well as in physical conformation; and the contrasts exhibited in the persons, language, and manners of people separated from each other only by an imaginary division line of territory, but yet so wholly opposite in all that constitutes nationality, were most marked and striking. The road, besides being picturesque, has many tunnels, which are lighted by small lights fixed on the walls at distances of about a yard apart, and the effect of a long vista of these small glimmering stars seen in the subterranean gloom is very pretty. At Verviers there was a grand sensation. Triumphal arches, tricolours in abundance, bands of music, soldiers, and crowds of excited people greeted the royal travellers; and here, also, the King and Queen of the Belgians, who had accompanied her Majesty thus far, took leave of her Majesty on their return to Brussels. The Prussian military now, for the first time, made their appearance; and, among other indications of the proximity of a military state, not the least was a charming vivandière, with her belt slung across her shoulders, and in her green uniform and mannish trousers and boots. Here the Queen was received with music, salutes, waving of hats, and, for the first time on her journey, with a real, genuine, hearty, almost English cheer. The next station at which the train stopped was Herbesthal, the point at which the Prussian territory commences, where her Majesty was joined by the Crown Prince of Prussia. At Aix-la-Chapelle the King of Prussia received her Majesty, accompanied by all the high functionaries of the province, the members of the corps diplomatique, the burgomasters and the members of the Council; and the ladies of the nobility and of the first families of Aix met at the station, dressed in white, to present flowers to the Queen, and thus render more brilliant the reception of her Majesty upon entering the Prussian dominions. During the few hours her Majesty remained in Aix-la-Chapelle a mounted guard of honour, composed of the young men of the first families of the city, attended upon her Majesty; and a splendid déjeûner was given to the royal party at the hotel of Chevalier Nelissen, the second burgomaster. After having viewed the ancient monuments and other objects worthy of notice in Aix-la-Chapelle, the King of Prussia and his august visitors took their departure by special train for Cologne, the whole vast population of which appeared to have poured out of the city, so enormous was the crowd; and again there were triumphal arches, festoons, bands of music, and, above all, troops in abundance. Here the royal party left the railway for the private carriages, and drove off at once to the station of the Bonn railway, passing through the principal part of the city of Cologne, which presented a most gay and brilliant spectacle. Flags spanned the streets till they seemed all one triumphal arch, and the bells rang a merry peel from the many churches around. Dense masses of people lined the way, and belied the national character by the loud and lusty cheers with which they greeted the new guests of their sovereign. Arriving at the banks of the Rhine, whence the railway runs to Bonn, another scene of military pomp and popular ardour displayed itself, not inferior to what had taken place elsewhere; and a very short time brought the royal travellers to the Brühl station of the railway, close to the palace of the King of Prussia, where her Majesty arrived soon after. His Majesty complimented the Queen on her healthy appearance after her fatigue and travels, and remarked, that he thought she must be a better sailor than Prince Albert, who looked pale and emaciated, as if he could but ill-brook the blustering of rude Boreas.

Here not less than six hundred musicians, composed of thirty of the bands of different regiments of the Prussian service, joined their efforts to produce a concert, or musical salute of welcome, from the softest piano note up to the most deafening forte that was ever inflicted on mortal ears. Great crowds of people were assembled around the palace, by whom the Queen and her royal host were enthusiastically cheered. Her Majesty, after listening for some time to this new kind of military concert monstre, retired within the palace, and the royal party soon after dined.

COLOGNE, TUESDAY EVENING.—This afternoon her Majesty left Brühl and proceeded to Bonn, to witness the inauguration of the statue of Beethoven. In the evening a fête far exceeding in splendour and magnificence any with which she had been gratified on her various tours in her own country or abroad was prepared for her Majesty. Cologne was illuminated, and the whole Rhine was one vast feu de joie. As twilight advanced, liquid lines of light were seen stealing like liquid gold along the massive outline of the antique city, and then the whole mass glittered with twinkling lights; a little longer and the lines of brightness shot across the Rhine by the bridge of boats; again a little longer and the tête du pont on the opposite bank to Cologne became brilliant by the same magic influence. Along the river shores the twinkle of the innumerable lights dotted the darkness like diamonds, till the line of arrowy silver was lost in a blaze of splendour on the upper part of the river, a mile and a half above the bridge of boats. The surface of the river blazed, too, with lights of dazzling brilliancy, and on the eastern shore the lamps on the masts of every vessel lying alongside mingled with little globes of exquisite transparency, in colours of more than Chinese variety, which illuminated the hotels. The whole vast space thus framed in light sparkled and twinkled like a firmament.

In a minute or two a steam-vessel, the Princess of Prussia, belonging to the Dusseldorf Company, glided slowly up the Rhine, in the direction of Brühl, as far as St. Tremond, the place at which her Majesty was to embark on coming from Brühl, her masts bearing signals of various colours, and her cabins and saloons literally a blaze of light. Rockets of the most brilliant colours shot up instantaneously from all parts of the horizon, forming, as they bent gracefully towards a centre in the air, a canopy of brief splendour; and during the interval that elapsed a dead silence prevailed among the orderly spectators. A quarter of an hour after a rocket preceded the appearance of the Fairy, which bore her Majesty and her royal host. Instantaneously the whole firmament was in a blaze of light. Rockets, and other feux d'artifice filled the air during the whole time in every direction; salutes of artillery were fired on all sides; the Prussian troops on the shores kept up a continuous fire of musketry; and from the horizon many coloured lights, which were burnt in large masses, shed a bright glare over the scene. The imagination cannot conceive a more striking and imposing display; and, as the steamer approached the bridge of boats the bridge spanned the river like a band of silver light. And, as a climax to the Festbeleuchtung, the cathedral of Cologne was illuminated. The bridge being opened, Her Majesty's river yacht, the Fairy, passed through to the landing-place, and her Majesty drove through the principal streets of Cologne, which were brilliantly illuminated and decorated with flags. Her Majesty, who was enthusiastically received by the people, returned to Brühl by railroad.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 13.—This afternoon her Majesty and suite, accompanied by the King of Prussia, left Brühl for Cologne, in order to see the remarkable sights of the city. As the Queen passed round the cathedral a vast crowd of persons lined the way. Having made the circuit of the exterior, her Majesty and the other distinguished personages left there carriages and entered the cathedral. The bells were set tolling at the time, and their blended tones, more deep, and at the same time more soft, than those of the finest organ, produced the grandest harmony conceivable. The choir, one of the most perfect specimens of Gothic architecture extant, the famous shrine of the Three Kings of Cologne, were visited by the royal party, which then, leaving the cathedral, proceeded to the Church of St. Ursula, and to other objects of interest in the city. They then returned to Brühl.

Her Majesty will leave Brühl to-morrow for Coblentz' in order to go to Stolzenfels. She will embark on the Rhine at Bonn, on board the steamer (belonging to the Dusseldorf company) which has already been used by her. The hour of departure is not yet fixed. As her Majesty has stayed at Brühl a day longer than was at first intended, she will stop only one night at Stolzenfels instead of two, as at first arranged. Her Majesty will arrive at Stolzenfels to-morrow (Thursday) night, where she will sleep, starting the next day for Mayence. She will sleep there, and proceed on Saturday to Wurzburg, where she will go to the palace of the King of Bavaria, remaining there during the Sunday. On the next day one long journey, by way of Bamberg, will bring the royal party to Coburg.

BONN, THURSDAY, AUGUST 14.—To-day her Majesty, Prince Albert, the King and Queen of Prussia, the King and Queen of the Belgians, &c., embarked for Stolzenfels. Her Majesty was in excellent spirits and health. At Coblentz the preparations to receive the royal visitors are on the grandest scale, and a general illumination will take place. The British royal steamer at Cologne is to ascend the Rhine as far as Mayence, there to wait for the return of the Queen after her visit to Frankfort, on her way home from the Coburg territory. The weather in Germany and Belgium continues to be very rainy.

At the concert at the palace of Bruhl, on Wednesday night, Meyerbeer conducted and Liszt performed two pianoforte pieces. Some conversation taking place during one of his performances amongst the royal personages, Liszt stopped suddenly in the midst of the fantasia, and did not conclude it. A similar occurrence took place in St. Peterburgh with the pianist, who received a polite intimation from the Emperor to withdraw from the Russian dominions. Staudigl, Pischek, Martius (the great tenor, from Berlin,) Mademoiselle Tuchek (from the same capital), and Pauline Viordot (sister of Malibran), sung at this concert. Sphor, Balios, and Fetes, were invited to be present.

During the visit of her Majesty at Bonn, the Queen walked for half an hour in the garden of the house where Prince Albert lodged whilst he pursued his studies at the University.

It has been arranged that the royal yacht shall sail from Antwerp direct to the Isle of Wight, it being her Majesty intention to land at the island, and sojourn at Osborne House for some time on returning from Germany. It is also intended that the excellent arrangement of only sailing by daylight shall be adopted on the return of her Majesty in the royal yacht; and the Queen will leave Antwerp in the afternoon and anchor off Flushing for the night, and then proceed next morning to the Isle of Wight.

THE QUEEN AT BRUHL.—The following speech, delivered by the King of Prussia, in proposing the health of Her Majesty, after dinner at Brühl, on Tuesday, the 12th instant, will be interesting to the reader; but, in order to enable him fully to understand the sentiment conveyed in it, it may be mentioned that it was formely the custom of the German armies after having won a battle, to fire, on the very field of battle, a round of all the artillery as a proclamation of victory. This was called, "Victoria Schiessen." The custom has grown into desuetude, but the term remains, and the word "Victoria" is therefore in the German language and poetry especially consecrated to victory, and associated with the idea of a song of triumph after battle. Indeed, the word is only used in Germany in this sense, except as the name of the Goddess of Victory. The object of the King in wording the toast as he did was to pay a delicate compliment to the Queen of England, and the original, of which the following is a translation (by a German, let it be observed), is considered to have effected that object. It is also a very excellent specimen of good racy German diction:—"Gentlemen! Fill your glasses to the brim! There is a word which inspires with unspeakable delight every British and German heart. That word resounded once over a field of battle, after a fierce struggle, as the symbol of a brotherhood in arms, which had been blessed with success. This day that word resounds, after 30 years of peace, that the happy fruit of the arduous work of those days, here in the German lands, on the banks of the beautiful stream of the Rhine—that word is 'Victoria!' Gentlemen, take your glasses, and empty them to the last drop. The object of the toast is, 'Her Majesty, the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland Long live Queen Victoria and her most illustrious Consort!'" Among those who dined with the Royal party while with the King of Prussia was the celebrated Baron Humboldt. Baron Bulow was to have been present also, but was prevented by very serious indisposition.—Times' Correspondent.

3rd. Its short, easy, and inexpensive carriage, and consequent facility for getting the wool early to market.
4th. Its admirable adaptation for a family residence, from its comfortable dwelling and many improvements, and its highly respectable locality.
